Activity 1: Introduction

What animal(s) do you think of when you see these adjectives?

| Quiet   |  |
|---------|--|
| Busy    |  |
| Slow    |  |
| Cunning |  |
| Gentle  |  |
| Loyal   |  |

In fact, the floor is flat in the first picture, and there are no triangles (three lines connected) in the second picture. Our brain tricks us to see things that are not true. We call these optical illusions.

Instead of directly pointing out their characteristics, writers often refer to characters as animals to illustrate their characteristics. This figure of speech is called allusion.

Look at the definitions of the two words from the dictionary below.

We now know what these two words mean. But do you know how to use them?

Activity 2: Understanding usage through corpus

Today, we will learn how to tell the two words apart by looking at how they are used in real life.

We will look at the Corpus of Contemporary American English. A corpus is a database of texts from many sources, such as newspapers, TV shows, and academic journals. By searching keywords, we can observe how words are used in different places. The following are places where you can find the word allusion and illusion in fiction:

1. Circle all the noun & noun phrases that contain "allusion" or "illusion" in the sentence.

- 2. Do you see any relationship between them?
- 3. Based on what you have observed, what is the difference between allusion and illusion?

Activity 3: Application

1. Try to finish the cloze passage with these two words and discuss with your groupmates why you chose the answer. You may need to change the form of the word to make it grammatically correct.

A magician came to our school to perform today. I enjoyed the performance very much even though I know it is just an ______. During the show, he ______ life as the ______ he stages everyday.

"Why?" we asked.

"Life is like a rollercoaster. Do you always hear this _____? I think we should first remember the most important things in life are not tangible. We may think we will always be rich, but it becomes an ______ when we lose all the money. We may think everyone loves us, but one day we will find ourselves all alone in the world."

He explained further by _____ our lives to a circle. "We come to the world with nothing. We leave the world with nothing, despite whatever we have done on earth. We all know about this _____, but we still don't do much about it. Isn't this the ultimate _____?"

2. Listen to the song Underbite by Protest The Hero. Have a listen and discuss the following questions with your classmates.

[Strong language in the first sentence and throughout the spoken verse of the MV. May not be suitable for younger students; start from 2:10 if strong language is to be avoided]

"An illusion seldom spoken. An understanding between you and I that the ground that you stand on is somehow less than mine.
An allusion to a broken home,
left on the street and chilled to the bone.
So hey, we still feeling good?
Now you comprehend our complex relationship, consumer/consumed.
You're just some stupid kid and I'm a megalomaniac."

- 1. What does the illusion refer to?
- 2. By saying the situation is an allusion to a broken home, what does the narrator mean? What emotion(s) is he conveying?
- 3. Look back on your life. Are there things in your life that seem to be actually illusions? Try to complete the sentences below. You can refer to the lyrics and the following word bank for ideas.
