

Transcription of -ed endings in Passage 2

Blue: correct pronunciation

Red: wrong pronunciation

HK02

[access web page “Browse” of corpus website

(https://corpus.eduhk.hk/english_pronunciation/index.php/our-spoken-english/) → ‘Browse’

→ click “Filter Speaker” → select data page “Passage Two” of HK02]

The Boy Who Cried Wolf

There was once a poor shepherd boy who used (/ju:sɪd/) to watch his flocks in the fields next to a dark forest near the foot of a mountain. One hot afternoon, he thought up a good plan to get some company for himself and also have a little fun. Raising his fist in the air, he ran down to the village shouting, “Wolf, Wolf.” As soon as they heard him, the villagers all rushed (/rʌʃɪd/) from their homes, full of concern for his safety, and two of his cousins even stayed (/steɪd/) with him for a short while. This gave the boy so much pleasure that a few days later he tried (/traɪd/) exactly the same trick again, and once more he was successful. However not long after, a wolf that had just escaped (/ɪ'skɪpɪd/) from the zoo was looking for a change from its usual diet of chicken and duck. So, overcoming its fear of being shot, it actually did come out from the forest and began to threaten the sheep. Racing down to the village, the boy of course cried (/kraɪd/) out even louder than before. Unfortunately, as all the villagers were convinced (/kən'vɪns/) that he was trying to fool them a third time, they told him, “Go away and don’t bother us again.” And so the wolf had a feast.

Correct pronunciation:

The Boy Who Cried Wolf

There was once a poor shepherd boy who used (/ju:st/) to watch his flocks in the fields next to a dark forest near the foot of a mountain. One hot afternoon, he thought up a good plan to get some company for himself and also have a little fun. Raising his fist in the air, he ran down to the village shouting, “Wolf, Wolf.” As soon as they heard him, the villagers all rushed (/rʌʃt/) from their homes, full of concern for his safety, and two of his cousins even stayed (/steɪd/) with him for a short while. This gave the boy so much pleasure that a few days later he tried (/traɪd/) exactly the same trick again, and once more he was successful. However not long after, a wolf that had just escaped (/ɪ'skeɪpt/) from the zoo was looking for a change from its usual diet of chicken and duck. So, overcoming its fear of being shot, it actually did come out from the forest and began to threaten the sheep. Racing down to the village, the boy of course cried (/kraɪd/) out even louder than before. Unfortunately, as all the villagers were convinced (/kən'vɪnst/) that he was trying to fool them a third time, they told him, “Go away and don’t bother us again.” And so the wolf had a feast.